Shadows on the River is the third in Hall's "Shadows" series of novels. All three of the "Shadows" novels are about women who must face the shadows in their pasts before they can move onto life and love in the present. In Shadows on the River, heroine Ally Roarke witnessed a horrific crime when she was 14 years old. She watched her best friend murdered – and there was nothing she could do about it. No one believed her when she told them what she had seen.

The story opens 25 years later. Ally is a single mom with a profoundly deaf daughter whom she would do anything for. When the partner of the man who murdered her childhood friend dies, she suspects foul play.
